ACID STOMACHS ARE DANGEROUS

Common Sense Advice by a Distinguished Specialist.
"Acid" stomachs are dangerous because acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach, thus hindering and preventing the proper action of the stomach and leading to probably nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble from which people suffer. Ordinary medicines and medical treatments are useless in such cases, for they leave the source of the trouble, the acid in the stomach, as dangerous as ever. The acid must be neutralized, and its formation prevented, and the best thing for this purpose is a powerful of bisulphated magnesia, a simple antacid, taken in a little warm or cold water after eating, which not only neutralizes the acid, but also prevents the fermentation from which acidity is developed. Foods which ordinarily cause greatest distress may be eaten with impunity if the food is followed with a little bisulphated magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist, and should always be kept handy—Advt.

NO CHANGE MADE IN SCOTSDALE ON SCHOOL MILLAGE

Placed at Ten Mills Although Division is Shifted on Funds.

HEAT AND VENTILATING PLANTS

These for the Chestnut and Pittsburg
Street Grade Buildings are Deferred
Until Later: School for the Blind is Given a Place; Other Newsw Notes.

SCOTSDALE, May 21.—The Scottsdale Board of Education at their regular meeting set the tax rate for the coming year at ten and one-half mills, the same as it was last year with the exception that while the general fund last year called for nine mills and the sinking fund for one and one-half mills, the district for the year will be eight and three-fourth mills for general expenses and one and three-fourth mills for paying off the bonded indebtedness. This tax levied which was recommended by the finance committee is based on the last assessed valuation of $3,924,548. The borough millage was set a few weeks ago at ten mills.

The proposition of making improvements in the heating and ventilating of the Chestnut and Pittsburg street grade buildings was discussed at length, and the general opinion of the board that both of these buildings in the building could be improved, but it was also the opinion of the board that this is not a time when the expense can be handled. The improvement, it was considered, might require a mill or two of tax extra, which none of the members felt fully in a mood to do at this time. Miss Anna Staley was again elected the substitute teacher and her term of compensation will be the same as that paid the teacher for whom she may be called upon to act as substitute. The secretary reported receiving from Principal William M. Edwards the sum of $608 tuition paid by pupils. For part of the term, who came from East Huntingdon township, and Upper Tyrone township.

The tax report showed that at the last meeting there was $3,161.26, and for April there was collected $1,141.97, leaving $2,019.29 to be collected. The treasurer reported in the general fund $1,713.90, and in the sinking fund $1,351.04.

A request came from Miss Edna L. Crouse, librarian, for the use of a room in the school building for Miss Margaret Quirk, of the Pennsylvania Home Teaching Society, which will teach the blind people of this section, and the board gave the use of one of the rooms for this purpose. The first of this work was on Tuesday, and quite a number of the blind people were given an opportunity to take up reading. A number of volumes in the collection used by the blind were to be available for these interested people. The next movement for the blind in this section. The lessons are free. This school term was set at nine months, same as last year, the term to open on September 7. This is about a week less than usual.

THEY'VE COME TO THE POINT.
The second commencement of Mt. Pleasant township high school will be held in the auditorium of the school building on Friday evening at 8.15 o'clock. The music of the evening will be by the Grand Army orchestra. Leon Ritzhart will give his prize composition, award from the University of Pittsburgh, 1914, "Life's Steps in Education." Miss Staley, who also took first honors will be the other representative of the class with the essay, "The Life of Helen Keller." Dr. J. E. Cartwright will be the orator of the evening. The term of four years, being his subject, Miss Elizabeth I. Martin, supervisor of music, will sing a solo. "Yesterday and Today." Rev. A. F. Kelso will give the invocation.

There are 15 in the graduating class. Two Scottsdale people are on the faculty, Hubert C. Eicher, principal, and H. B. For A. Smith of the other people expect to attend the exercises.

The class night and baccalaureate services which were held during the past week were both immensely successful and reflected great credit upon the high school.

Next Saturday a new Apex four reel sensational drama "Queen of the Forty Thieves," will be presented featuring Denmark's most distinguished actress, Miss Duxbury Tyson and a big company. This comedy is in three acts of wholesale fun and laughter. The climax of the third act is a scream as there are three brides and nobody claims them until Jimmy, who is pulled out from under the bed, is arrested for kidnapping babies. All ends well with fishermen who claim his twins and the Indian who claims his, and Jimmy is released. There is also the spectacle of a mermaid. For the benefit of charity "The Pilot of Tadoussac," an opera composed and written by the Florentine K. Goldsmith is to be presented by local talent in the Colonial Theatre on the night of Thursday, May 28. The music has been composed by Herbert J. Wright of Silverwood Music School of Chicago; Alfred Weller, a composer of international repute, and other leading musical professors, and some of the numbers have been accepted by Willis & Company, a publishing house of Cincinnati. Miss Goldsmith is a local teacher of music. She is a graduate of the Fletcher Music School of Boston.

The scenes of the opera are laid in Montreal and the Thousand Islands, and the plot is a love on the banks of the Saguenay and the Lawrence rivers. The first act opens with a brilliant love scene, a cast of about 25 young people in picturesque costumes and scenery. The second act opens with a scene on the Thousand Islands. Some unique stage effects will be introduced. Miss Goldsmith is being assisted in producing the play by Mrs. Lotta Hall Holsternkamp of Pittsburgh.

TARIFF WORKS BADLY

Iron and Steel Industry Hard Hit by Underwood Bill.

The adverse effect of the Underwood tariff bill upon the iron and steel industry is commented upon by the Daily Iron Trade in reviewing a report of the exports and imports for the first six months the measure has been in operation.

The figures show increased imports of iron plate amounting to 1,100 per cent, and of 37 per cent in finished iron and steel imports. On the other hand, exports have declined 31 per cent.

The tin plate business was the hardest hit, but virtually all lines of the iron and steel industry have been adversely affected. Pig iron exports show a considerable falling off under the new law.

Laclede Company About to Start Work on Big Gas Plant.

Permits have been issued to the Laclede Gas Light Company for the construction of 55 by-product coke ovens in the southern city limits of St. Louis to cost $750,000. Work will be started soon. The plant expects to spend about $1,500,000 in ovens and buildings on 25 acres of ground on the north bank of the River near Park, a short distance west of the Iron Mountain tracks.

Beside the ovens, the company soon will begin construction work on a gas holder to contain 1,000,000 cubic feet of gas, an office building, gas and water pumping stations, central power plant, ammonia tanks, machine shops and a by-product plant.

The international executive board of the United Mine Workers of America decided that no general strike should be called, but that the Colorado strike should be pushed.

SULPHUR DRIES UP ECZEMA AND STOPS ITCHING

This Old Time Skin Healer
Is Used Just Like any Cold Cream.

With the first application of bold-sulphur cream the angry itching attending an eczema, eruption, cancer and its remarkable healing powers begin. Sulphur, says a renowned dermatologist, just common bold-sulphur, made into a thick cream will soothe and heal the skin when irritated and broken out with Eczema or any form of eruption. The moment it is applied all itching ceases and after two or three applications the Eczema disappears, leaving the skin clear and smooth.

He tells Eczema sufferers to get from any good pharmacy an ounce of bold-sulphur cream and apply it to the irritated, inflamed skin, the same as you would any cold cream.

For many years this soothing, healing sulphur has occupied a secure position in the treatment of cutaneous affections by reason of its painless-de-stroying property. It is not only antiseptic, but also antipruritic, anti-irritant and remarkably healing in all irritable and inflammatory conditions of the skin. While not always establishing a permanent cure it never fails to favorably relieve the irritation and heat the Eczema right up and it is often years later before any eruption again appears on the skin.—Adv.

THURSDAY EVENING, MAY 21, 1914.

THE ANTIDOTE.

The putting out of 3,000 coke ovens in the Conneltsville region last week is an index of the industrial trend. The coke-makers and iron-makers are getting ready for a dull summer and the coke-makers must necessarily follow suit. Coke cannot be piled on the yards forever.

When we come to think it over it does seem too bad that the country has to suffer for the sake of politics, but it must also be remembered that without popular endorsement political leaders could not bring such dire conditions upon the people.

We are suffering from the effects of the fever of unrest which afflicted the nation in 1912. It might be well for the individual victims of this unfortunate malady who are now convalescing to take account of the present situation and highly resolve to get vaccinated the next time.

It is now admitted in business circles that had there been no Republican war, and had President Taft or any Republican candidate been elected with a Republican administration to back him the nation would have been enjoying an era of prosperity and expansion greater than it ever knew before.

It is too late for vain regrets, but it is not too late to get about to repair the mischief that has been done. The situation is not past mending. The Democratic times are not prosperous, but neither are they desperate. The Democrats have no wish to destroy the nation's industries. They are acting in good faith, but with bad judgment. They will be doubtless be very reluctant to see and acknowledge their error. It will probably be necessary for the "Republicans" to do that for them. In the meantime, let everybody take courage. The country hasn't gone to the dogs even if it has gone Democratic. It needs the antidote which will be administered this fall.

NATURAL GAS BY-PRODUCT GAS.

The Natural Gas Association of America, in session at Saint Louis, is discussing the necessity of advancing rates for natural gas, which may be interpreted to mean that the natural gas companies are getting ready to advance the price of their highly desirable domestic fuel.

One of the reasons why the by-product coke oven has not flourished in the Conneltsville region, and the millions of feet of gas which daily go to waste in the manufacture of coke are not utilized, is the fact that the competition of natural gas has been too strong and by-product recovery practices too expensive. These conditions, however, are slowly reverting themselves, and there may come a time when the by-product oven will be profitable because of the local market for its gas.

It is possible that the virgin Greene county coal field will become a by-product coke district because of these changing conditions.

BLARNEY.

The Barefoot crew of the Young Men's Association of the Conneltsville region says "The Courier and the Conneltsville Herald" miserably failed in their attempt to fust Ryan and his bi-partisan associates on the Democratic party as candidates.

If any considerable number of Democrats believe such drivel as this we are mistaken as to their intelligence. The Courier had no candidates at the primary on the Republican ticket, much less on the Democratic ticket.

The News, on the other hand, gave violent and vociferous support to the Palmer-McCormick combination in the state and the Sterling mine in the county. It evidently feared the opposition, upon which it heaped a constant flood of bitter abuse.

Since the closing, the attitude of the News in its criticism of Ryan with its previous position. With the closing of the political vituperation has been succeeded with flattery. Listen to this delicate bit of blandishment: "Mr. Ryan's strength, we are convinced, was more personal than political, less general than factional, but he should be highly complimented, nevertheless, by the magnitude it assumed." Evidently "Mr. Ryan" isn't the only gentleman who has kissed the blarney stone.

The Barefoot organ some time since announced that the Democratic party had no use for the Ryan and the Donnelly and the Breennans and others of Irish name and descent. Some of the Democratic bosses complained at the time that this was heavy editorial conclusion, and this opinion is now confirmed by The News itself, which advances the ingenious explanation that the Irish are all right as Democratic voters but all wrong as Democratic candidates.

"Mr. Ryan" should feel complimented by his vote, support the Democratic ticket with his accustomed loyalty and be prepared to be called a bi-partisan traitor when he presumes to run for office again.

BI-PARTISAN.

In view of the past record of the Barefoot organization in Fayette county, one would think that its irrepressible organs would be tipped off to let up on the "bi-partisan" business.

It is an open secret that the Democratic organization of this county subsisted on Guffey bounty for years, and it is always a party to political deals made by the political boss. If there were any bi-partisan deals, the present Democratic bosses would right in on the ground.

If we must have a chapter on bi-partisan politics perhaps it might be well to write a complete one. It will be more interesting.

We congratulate the esteemed Conneltsville News upon the nomination of President Hulse.

The Hon. Jim Keegan was slaughtered, too. The Irish are all right, except when they want on the ticket, and then in the language of the Conneltsville News, Barefoot organ, the Democratic party has no use for the Ryan and the Keegans.

The coke trade reviews of the Bull Moose organ are not any more reliable than its political prophecies.

The Brownsville woman who swallowed five deadly bicloride of mercury tablets now takes them all back.

"There is not a Democrat but can stand enthusiastically behind the ticket named," says the enthusiastic Young Men's Association. Yes, but there's a lot of them who will stand where they can give it an enthusiastic kick.

The name is not Return J. Ryan, it's just plain Mike.

Chairman Sterling predicts a victory for his personally-named ticket. It is a little early for political predictions, but Bruce evidently believes it is good business to "claim everything with confidence."

The Bull Moose ghost appeared at the primary.

There is no question where Fayette county stands. Its citizens have had enough of Democratic times. They want to get back to the old standards, the old faith, the old leadership and the old conditions as fast as possible.

Colonel Thomas B. Cruger of Greene county was some runner.

The Barefoot State went through without a crack, but there won't be much left of it after the November election.

The office of State Senator may still be seeking John William Dawson, but it is evident that he is in no danger of being run down and trampled to death by enthusiastic Republicans seeking to do him honor.

Connellsville starts the baseball season well.

Denny O'Neil will find before the election is over that his name is Denny, and his address is McKeesport, not Pennsylvania.

The News-not-Standard refers to the Republican Legislative ticket as Senator Cronk's "hand-picked nominees," but it no doubt inadvertently neglects to say anything about William B. Senator Sterling's "hand-picked Democratic nominees."

The Colonel is back a little shaken in body but not at all in spirit.

John William Dawson probably got the Bull Moose nomination.

Colonel Bill Stone might resume his explanation of the Workmen's Compensation act, now that the editorial of the primary campaign have ceased up.

Abe Martin.

Uncle Abe Hulseizer was in town today and reported that the folks were "cupin' him" who wrote considerable "cupin' didn't say a likelier thing."

The fellow who tells a funny story about Ryan and his "hand-picked nominees" that they've got one feller.

COKERS OUTPLAY UNIONTOWNERS IN OPENING GAME 7-3

Conley Touched Up for Twelve Hits While Silcox Allows but Six.

MAYOR THROWS OUT FIRST BALL.

A Wild Heave by the City's Chief Executive Opens the Pennsylvania-West Virginia Season at Fayette Field; the Cokers Showing Fiercely.

Jimmy Mack's Cokers got a bad start in the opening game at Fayette Field yesterday afternoon but they recovered, overcame a three run lead and escaped home the winners by a score of 7 to 3. Donley, the Uniontown twirler with the steam roller movement, was batted all around the lot for a total of 12 hits while Yon Silcox held the Uniontowners down to five hits, keeping them well scattered.

The game was witnessed by a crowd of approximately 1,000 fans. When this vast multitude had gathered within the gates and the hour of 3:30 had come, Mayor Rockwell Marietta walked dignifiedly out into the pitcher's box and with one mighty heave chucked the nice white pellet in the direction of the home plate. The mayor had a vague idea of just what the home plate was but he threw in the general direction of the grandstand and catcher Baughman recovered the ball on the third bound. He tossed it back to Silcox and the fray began.

The Cokers were their new uniforms, but Uniontown still appeared with the same old makeshift whites, their new outfits not having arrived. They were mostly all of one color, however, except that of Captain West who wore one of dark blue, by way of variety, perhaps. The diamond had been freshly rolled and many of the humps of the outfield leveled off. A big canvas stretched over the fence in center field kept a lot of the cheap sports from seeing the game for nothing.

It looked pretty much like Uniontown all through in the first three innings. Silcox had put out a few, while, walking Smith the first man to face him. Vassel went out short to first and Ball sent a liner right at Conley who, after a good swing, hit the ball a mile over Engle's head. Smith romping home with the first run of the season. Hughes ran the bases and Kennerd drove in at him and Miller scored the inning by flying to Byron.

Rutherford scored in the second when Getzie swung wild on his grounder. Raymond scored in the third, singled through short, and Smith sent a sacrifice fly to middle field. The first of Connelleville's two big innings was fourth when Getzie trotted down to first after Donley had pegged four bad ones. He advanced on Baughman's clean hit to right and both runners registered on an Engle's two base hit to left which Hughes returned badly to the plate, the ball having been responsible for Baughman's score. Silcox's roller caused the Uniontowners to swing at all sorts of shapes trying to field it, the result being that Tom got a hit and Engle scored, in all wild applause.

In the sixth, Getzie's single past third, Byron's out at first and Engle's second double, this time to center, scored another run. Engle being thrown out trying to reach third. Catcher Rutherford was largely responsible for Connelleville's three runs in the eighth. Cherry singled and the Uniontown backup threw far over Miller's head in trying to catch him off the bag. A few seconds later he did the same thing and Cherry romped home. Then came the deluge. With none out, our own "Chip" Francis evaded a sliding fielder, got a hit to third, Getzie sacrificed, and Byron got a hit to center scoring Chip. A bad throw by Smith put Byron on third and he scored on Baughman's third fly, a nice one to right.

After that there was nothing doing. The play was snappy and both sides put out of all sorts of fielding mix-ups. Uniontown's outfield seems especially clever fielders.

UNIONTOWN ABILITY
Two base hits—Engle, 2. Baughman, sacrifice hit—Getzie, sacrifice fly—Smith, Double play—Hughes to Myers, Getzie, Myers and Engle. Stolen bases—Miller, 1st and 2nd base. Connellsville 5; Uniontown 3. Struck out—by Silcox 4; by Donley 1. Hit by pitched ball—McCarthy, Byron. Umpire—Nagle.

NOTES OF THE GAME.
Baughman handles himself well behind the bat, throws well, and three hits out of four times up is certainly a nice showing for the opening game. Engle has had two hits each in the last two games.
Hughes at third is mighty fast but the way he heaves them over to first is heart-breaking at times.

Donley has pitched to Connellsville on three different occasions and the Cokers have his offerings sized up pretty well.

The size of the crowd and the enthusiasm manifested was pleasing to the management of the two teams. Engle, however, thinks he will have to strengthen up a bit.

Wesley Uniontown's captain, gives the impression of being slow but at times he speeded up remarkably. Uniontown plays at Fayette Field again this afternoon and tomorrow the season opens at the county seat with Connellsville the attraction.

To have Connellsville win an opening game would augur well for a change in luck.
Tony Hendine, the wetter man, was the first to grab some free publicity at the ball park. He has announced that he will give free "hot dogs" for a week to the first Connellsville player hitting a home run. Tony also distributed folders containing a schedule of games to be played this season.

Trotter Defeats Leisenring.
Trotter's third team defeated the Leisenring third team by the score of 14 to 7 in a nine inning game yesterday. The famous batter of Trotter, Leo Tikoy, got two home runs.

Dutch Bottom Wins.
Dutch Bottom defeated North End by the score of 9 to 0 last evening in a five inning game. Davidson plays North End tonight.

THE HISTORY OF CONNELLSVILLE COKE IS TOLD

Special Edition of the Weekly
Courier Relates the Tale.

IT COVERS MANY SUBJECTS

Past, Present and Future of the Region Discussed in an Attractive Magazine; Edition of Great Interest to Everyone in the Coke Trade.

The most comprehensive story of Connellsville coke that has yet been told is contained in the Special Historical and Statistical Number of The Weekly Courier, which was issued in magazine form this week. The edition is replete with interesting information concerning the Connellsville coke region. Although of moderate value to the general public, the coke trade because of the historical sketches it contains, other articles are included in the 68 pages and cover which make up the magazine.

This is the first time that a serious effort has been made to tell the history of the Connellsville coke region. The editorial forward clearly explains the intent of the publisher. It says:

"This is the story of Connellsville coke. We have perhaps not told it particularly well, and we are certain that we have not told it all; but we have endeavored within this limited scope to present something worthy of preservation in the way of statistical and historical information."

"The story is not a paid write-up of special interests for advertising purposes. It is a narration of fact without commercial consideration and without bias. Some of these prominently mentioned heretofore have contributed nothing toward the advancement of the coke trade, but they have contributed much to the history of Connellsville coke."

The edition contains an up-to-date directory of the coke works in the Connellsville, Lower Connellsville, Upper Connellsville and Greensburg Connellsville region. It also gives official statistics concerning the output of each region and its value. The following articles are presented:

The Connellsville and Lower Connellsville Coke Region.
The Upper Connellsville Coke Region.
The Greensburg Connellsville Coke Region.
Safety First in the Connellsville Region.
The Strict Inspection of Connellsville Region Coal Mines.
Labor Saving Devices of Connellsville Coking Practice.
Industrial Wars of the Connellsville Region.
Modern Methods of Coal Mining and Coke Making.
The Life of the Connellsville Coking Plant, by John W. Tolman.
By-Product Coking in and Out of the Connellsville Region.
Mining and Coking Practice in the Connellsville Region, by Fred C. Kelgley.
Hallmarks of the Connellsville Region.
Crushed Coke Production of the Connellsville Region.
Electric Light Power and Trolley Service.
Manufacturers of Fire Brick for Coke Ovens.
Mining and Coking Machinery Made in Home.

Benke and Banking in the Connellsville Coke Region.
The Large Lumber Needs of the Coke Region.
The Company Store System of the Coke Region.

One of the features of the magazine is the colored map on the cover showing the location of the various coke fields in respect to each other and the Pittsburgh road bed. Copies may be obtained at The Courier office for ten cents each, done up in an envelope for mailing. The cost of sending them by mail is seven cents each.

The Land of Broken Promises

A Stirring Story of the Mexican Revolution

By DANE COOLIDGE
Author of "The Fighting Paul," "Hidden Wars," "The Toldos," "The Illustrations by DON J. LAVIN

He was an old Mexican, with trembling hands and a face that told a tale of outrage that made his blood run cold. The red-daggers had come to his house at night; they had killed his wife and son, left him upon the ground for dead, and carried off his daughter, his precious.

But later, when the consular questioned him sharply, it developed that he had not far away, had no daughter to lose, and was, in fact, only a crazed old man who told for truth that which he feared would happen.

Notwithstanding the denouement, his story stirred the Mexican population to the depths, and when Bud and Phil tried to hire men to push the work on the mine, they realized that their troubles had begun. Not only was it impossible to engage laborers at any price, but on the following day Cruz Mendez, with his wife and children, and all his worldly possessions on his burro, came hurrying in from the camp and told them he could serve them no more.

"It is my woman!" he explained; "my Maria! Ah, if these revolutionists should see Maria they would steal her before my eyes!"

So he gave him his pay and the fifty dollars he had earned and, after the customary "Muchas gracias," and with the faithful Maria by his side, he went hurrying off to the store.

And now in crowded vehicles, with armed men riding in front and behind, the refugees from Moctezuma and the hot country began to pour into town, adding by their very haste to the panic of all who saw them.

They were the rich property owners who, having been subjected to forced contribution before, were now fleeing at the first rumor of danger, bringing their families with them to escape any being held for ransom.

In half a day the big hotel presided over by Don Juan de Dios Brachamonte was swarming with starved and country mothers and stony-faced families of children; and finally, to add insult to the general confusion, Don Cipriano Aragon y Tres Palacios came driving up to the door with his wife and the smiling Gracia.

If she had been in any fear of capture by the red-daggers, Gracia Aragon did not show it now, as she sprang lightly from the carriage and waited upon her lady mother. Perhaps, after a year or more at rumors and alarms, she had come to look upon impending revolutionary conflicts as no convenient excuse for a trip to town a long stop at the hotel, and even a dash to say "hello" in case the rebels pressed close.

However that may be, while Don Juan Brachamonte himself to preserve them from the gaze of the rebels, Gracia, with her beautiful face and her long, dark hair, attracted all eyes to look the American and make some comments to him.

And her mother seemed to Bud the mother glared upon him. After that he had a list of a party to return to the mine, and Phil said they would stay outside for a week. But as for Don Cipriano, when he came across them in the crowd he glared at them with malignant intensity and abruptly turned his back.

At La Fortuna he was the lord and master, with power to do as he pleased. But now once more the fortunes of war had turned against him, and he was forced to tolerate their presence. The band played in the plaza that evening, it being Thursday of the week, and as the cornet led with "La Paloma," and the bass viol and guitars beat the measure, all felt seemed to turn in that direction, and the fear of the raiders was still.

Around and around the band staid and in and out beneath the trees the pleasure-loving maidens came down below, walked decorously with their mothers; and the little band of Fortuna Americans, to whom life for some months had been a life of burdensome, awoke suddenly to the beauty of the evening.

And among the rest of the maidens, but far more twisting and high-bred, walked Gracia Aragon, at whom Bud in particular stole many secret glances from beneath the broad brim of his hat, hoping that by some luck the ladies would come upon the town, and he could defend her—his alone. For he felt that he could not fight against any hundred Mexicans that ever heathed.

CHAPTER XII.

In its inception the Fortuna hotel had not been intended for the use of civilians; in fact, its rates were precisely prohibitive for anyone not employed in gold—bad, since most of Americans had left, and seven dollars a day was no deterrent to the rich refugee land owners, it became of a sudden international, with a fine mixture of proud Spaniards and race-proud American adventurers. Not a very pleasing combination for the parents of romantic damsels destined for some prearranged marriage of state, but very exciting to the damsels and most provocative to the Americans.

After the promenade in the plaza the mothers by common consent preceded the upstairs reception-room, gathering their precious charges in close; while the Americans, after their custom, forsook the lobby, convenient to the bar. Not arguments about the revolution, and predictions of events to come served to pass the early evening, with many scornful glances at the Mexican ladies who went so insolently up the stairs. And then, as the refugees retired to their apartments and the spirit of adventure rose uppermost, Phil De Lancey made a dash out into the darkness and came back with a Mexican girl.

A serenade, boys! he announced, as the maidens fled sheepishly into the hotel. "Our guests, the fair señoritas, you know! Well, make those young Mexican ladies look like two spots before the war is over. Who's going now for a song beneath the windows? You know the old stand-by—'La Paloma' and 'Teretita Mia'—and you want to listen to me sing 'Me Gustan Toditos' to Gracia, the fairest of the fair! Come on, fellows, out in the plaza, and then listen to the old folks sing!"

They adjourned then, after a drink for courage, to the moonlight and the plaza; and there, beneath the shuttered windows and vacant balconies, the guitars and violins took up "La Paloma," while Phil and a few brave spirits sang.

A silence followed their first attempt, as well as their second. A third, and the consular of police, a wild creature owned and paid by the company, came around and made a few ineffectual protests.

But behind the company's concession, where by common consent the millant rurales kept their heads off, the Americans knew they were safe, and they again jolted the consular into taking a drink and departing. Then Don Juan took up the burden, and the setting back, hired by the hour, straggled on as if for eternity.

One by one the windows opened; grateful fathers stepped out on the balcony and, bound by the custom and reverence of the country, thanked them and bade them good night. But the two windows behind which the Senor Aragon and his family reposed did not open, and though the dwindling band stood directly under their balcony, and all knew that his daughter was the fairest of the fair, Don Juan did not wish them good night.

Perhaps he recognized the leading tenor and the big voice of Bud fooler, trying to still the riot—but, however it was, he would not speak to them, and De Lancey would not quit.

"Try 'em on American music!" he cried, as everyone but Bud went away in disgust. "The latest rag from Broadway, New York. Here, gimme that guitar, hombre, and listen to this now!"

He picked out a clever bit of syncopation and pitched his voice to a heady twang: "Down in the garden where the red roses grow, I love to go! Pick me like a flower, darling, as you know, love let me hear the first time, please!"

There was some singing to that, and it seemed to make an impression, for just as he was well started on the chorus the state of one of the shuttered windows and a patch of white showed through the spaces. It was the ladies, then, who were getting interested!

Phil waited on: "Sweetest honey-bee, be sweet to me! My heart is free, but here's the key!"

And then, positively, he could see that patch of white beat time. He took the guitar at that and sang on to the end, and at a suggestion of clapping in dumb-show he gave an encore and ragged it over again.

"'Ev'rybody's doing it, dole it, dole it!' he began, as the shadow dance ceased.

"The Senor Aragon informs me," he said, "that your music annoys him." "Well, let him come to the balcony and say his music annoys," answered Phil resolutely. "The gentleman refuses to do that!" responded Don Juan briefly.

"Then let him go to bed!" replied De Lancey, strumming a few syncopated chords; "I'm singing to his daughter." At that Don Juan came down off the porch in his slippers and they engaged in a protracted argument.

"What, don't I get a word?" demanded Phil grievously, "not a pleasant look from anybody? Sweetest honey-bee, be sweet to me!" he pleaded, turning pathetically to the lady's balcony; and then, with a sudden flourish, a white handkerchief appeared through the crack of the shutter and Gracia waved him good night.

"Enough, Don Juan!" he cried, laying down the guitar with a thump; "this ends our evening's entertainment!"

After paying and thanking the blotto musicians Phil joined Bud and the pair adjourned to their room, where, in the intervals of undressing, Phil favored the occupants of the adjoining apartment with an aria from "Ben-Hur."

But for all such nights of romance and music there is always a morning afterward; and a first tenor voice set to rattle never heeded much in the development of a mine. Though Bud had remained loyally by his friend in his evening serenade, for one, never forgot for a moment that they were in Fortuna to work the Eagle Tail and not to win the hearts of Spanish-Mexican señoritas, no matter how attractive they might be.

Bud was a practical man who, if he ever made love, would doubtless do it in a perfectly businesslike way, without hiring any string bands. But at the same time he was willing to make some concessions.

"Well, go ahead and get your sleep, then," he growled after trying three times in the morning to get his partner up; "I'm going out to the mine!"

Then, with a saddle-gun under his knee and his six-shooter hung at his hip, he rode rapidly down the road, turning out from time to time to look long and steadily at the ladies.

The dead-eyed arrieros, each with his combined multi-blind and whiplash swinging free, seemed to have very little on their minds but their pack-haulings, and yet they must be three days out from Moctezuma.

First of all, too, were well loaded with the products of the hot country—frangas of corn in red leather sacks, oranges and fruits in basketed crates, panoches of sugar in balanced frames, long joints of sugar-cane for the dulce peppers, and nothing to indicate either haste or flight.

Three times he let long pack-trains go by without a word, and then at last, overcome by curiosity, he inquired about the revolutionists.

"What revolutionists?" queried the old man to whom he spoke. "Why, the men of Bernardo Bravo," answered Bud; "the men who are marching to take Moctezuma."

"When I left Moctezuma," returned the old man politely, "all was quiet—there were no revolutionists. Since then, I cannot say."

"But the soldiers!" cried Bud. "Surely you saw them! They were marching to fight the rebels."

Perhaps so, shrugged the arriero, laying the back of his hand across the rump of a mule; "but I know nothing about it."

"No," muttered Bud, as he continued on his way; "and I'll bet nobody else does."

Inquiry showed that in this, too, he was correct. From those who traveled fast and from those who traveled slow he received the same wondering answer—the country might be filled with revolutionists; but, as for them, they knew nothing about it.

Not until he got back to Fortuna and the busy federal telegraph wire did he hear any more news of rapid marching of the Spaniards, and then, dawned upon him then was gradually dawning upon the whole town.

It was a false alarm, given out for purposes of state and the "higher politics" with which Mexico is cursed, and the most that was ever seen of Bernardo Bravo and his hordes was a few miserable creatures, half-starved, and with guns in their hands, who had come down out of the mountains east of Moctezuma and killed a few cows for beef.

Thoroughly disgusted, and yet vaguely alarmed at this bit of opera-warfare, Bud set himself resolutely to work to hire a man for their mine, and, as many poor people were out of employment because of the general stagnation of business, he soon had ten Mexicans at his call.

Then, as Phil had dropped out of sight, he ordered supplies at the store and engaged Cruz Mendez—who had spent his fortune in three days to pack the goods out of his mine.

They were ready to start the next morning if De Lancey could be found to order the powder and tools, and as the afternoon wore on and no Phil appeared, Bud went on a long hunt which finally discovered him in the balcony of their window, making signs in the language of the "bear" as a man who fights with a woman in Mexico is called.

"Say, Phil," he yelled, disregarding his partner's obvious preoccupation; "break away for a minute and tell me what kind of powder to get to break through the store closes at five o'clock, and—"

He thrust his head out the door as he spoke and paused, abashed. Through the half-closed portal of the next balcony but one he beheld the golden hair of Gracia Aragon, and she fixed her brown eyes upon him with a dazzling, mischievous smile.

"O-ho!" murmured Bud, laying a compolling hand on De Lancey and looking swiftly out of range; "in this is what you're up to—talking signals! But say, Phil," he continued, beckoning him promptly with a jerk of his head, "I got ten men hired and a lot of grub bought, and if you don't pick out that mining stuff we're going to lose a day. So get the lady to excuse you and come on now."

"In a minute," pleaded Phil, and he went at the end of his allotted time, and perhaps it was the imp of jealousy that put strength into Hooker's arm.

"Well, that's all right," said Bud, as Phil began his laughing excuses; "but you want to remember the Maine, pardner—we didn't come down here to play the bear. When they're any longer making to be done I want to be in on it. And you want to remember that promise you made me—you said you wouldn't have a thing to do with the Aragon outfit unless I was with you!"

"Why, you aren't! You aren't jealous, are you?" answered Hooker harshly. "Jealous as the devil! And I want you to keep that promise, sen?"

"Aw, Bud—" began De Lancey incredulously; but Hooker silenced him with a look. Perhaps he was really jealous, or perhaps he said so to have his way, but Phil said that he was in earnest, and he went quickly by his side.

Bud love had set his brain in a whirl, and he thought no more of his promise—only of some subtle way of meeting his inamorata, some way which Bud would fall to see.

CHAPTER XIII.

For sixty days and more, while the weather had been turning from cold to warm and they had been laboring feebly to clear away the great slide of loose rock that covered up the ledge, the Eagle Tail mine had remained a mystery.

Whether, like the old Eagle Tail of frontier fable, it was so rich that only the chunks into twenty-dollar gold pieces; or whether, like many other frontier mines, it was nothing but a hole in the ground, was a matter still to be settled. And Bud, for one, was determined to settle it quickly.

"Come on," he said, as Phil hesitated to open up the way to the lead; "we got a month, maybe less, to get to the bottom of this; and that the hills will be lousy with rebels. If they're nothing here, we want to find out about it quick and slip out while it's still quiet."

"Strike it, by gosh, they ain't enough red-daggers in Sonora to pry me loose from it. So show these hombres where to work and we'll be up against rock by the end of the week."

The original Eagle Tail tunnel had been driven into the side of a steep hill, and the ledge, which had been struck by a long shaft from the base of the frowning porphyry dikes that crowned the tops of the hills to the bottom of the canyon. On either side of the discovery gulch sharp ridges, perforated by the gophers' holes of the Mexicans and the ancient workings of the Spaniards, ran directly up the hill to meet the contact. But it was against the face of the big ridge itself that Kruger had driven his drift and exploded his giant blast of dynamite, and the whole slope had been altered and covered with a slide of rock.

Against this slide, in the days when the work was making time, Bud and his partner had directed their energies, throwing the loose stones aside, building up walls against the slip, and clearing the way to the solid schist. There, somewhere beneath the jumble of powder-filled rock, lay the ledge which, if they found it, would make them rich, and which, if they didn't, would drive them into the hands of the red-daggers, blasting them into pieces and groveling deeper until they could strike the contact, where the schist and porphyry met and the gold spray had spewed up between.

It was a bad man, this Bernardo Bravo, and he thought, and the gang of Mexicans that he had hired for muckers were marveled of ineptitude. Left to themselves, they accomplished nothing, since each problem they encountered seemed to present to them some element of insuperable difficulty, to solve which they either went into care or waited for the boss. Meanwhile they kept themselves awake by smoking cigarettes and telling stories about Bernardo Bravo.

To the Mexicans of Sonora, Bernardo Bravo was the personification of all the malevolent qualities—being a bandit chief who had turned first general and then rebel under Macrom, and the fact that he had at last been driven out of Chihuahua and therefore over into Sonora, made his malevolence all the more imminent.

Undoubtedly, somewhere over the east, where the Sierras towered like a blue wall, Bernardo and his outlaw followers were gathering for a raid, and the raid would bring death to Sonora.

task. Also, he refused to understand Spanish, and cut off all long-winded explanations and suggestions by an impatient motion to go to work, which the traidadores obeyed with shrugs and grins.

So Don Felipe turned powder-man and blacksmith, sharpening up the drills at the little forge they had fashioned and loading the holes with dynamite when it became necessary to break a rock, while Bud bossed the unwilling Mexicans.

In an old tunnel behind their tent they set a heavy gate, and behind it they stored their precious powder. Then came the portable forge and the blacksmith shop, just inside the mouth of the cave, and the tent backed up against it for protection. For if there is any one thing, next to horses, that the rebels are wont to steal, it is giant powder to blow up culverts with, or to lay on the counters of thugorous country merchants and frighten them into making contributions.

As for their horses, Bud kept them bolted and hobbled, close to the house, and no one ever saw him without his gun. In the morning, when he got up, he took it from under his pillow and hung it on his belt, and there it stayed until bedtime.

He also kept a sharp watch on the trail, above and below, and what few men did pass through were conscious of his eye. Therefore it was all the more surprising when, one day, looking up suddenly from leaving at a great risk, he saw the big Yaqui soldier, Amigo, gazing down at him from the cut bank.

Yes, it was the same man, but with a difference—his rifle and cartridge-belts were absent and his clothes were torn by the brush. But the same good-natured, competent smile was there, and after a few words with Bud he leaped nimbly down the bank and dodged ledge to ledge, good and plenty, and he went to say where to dig. We ain't doing much better than old Aragon did—just rooting around in that rock-pile—let's do a little timbering, and sink."

"You can't timber that rock," answered De Lancey decidedly. "And besides, it's cheaper to make a cut twenty feet deep than it is to tunnel or sink a shaft. Wait till we get to that porphyry contact—then we'll know where we're at."

"All right," grumbled Bud, "but seems like we're a long time getting there. What's the news downtown?"

"Well, the fireworks have begun again over in Chihuahua—Orosco and Salazar and that bunch—but it seems there was something to this Moctezuma scare, after all. I was talking to an American mining man from down there, and he told me that the federal marshals out to where the rebels were and then sat down and watched them cross the river without firing on them—some kind of an understanding between Bernardo Bravo and these blackleg federals."

"The only fighting there was was when a bunch of twenty Yaquis got away from their officers in the rough country and went after Bernardo Bravo by their lonehorns. That threw a big scare into him, too, but he managed to fight them off—and if I was making a guess I'd bet that your Yaqui friend was one of that fighting twenty."

"I reckon," assented Bud, "but don't you say nothing. I need that hombre in my business. Come on, let's go up and look at that cut—I come across an old board today, down in the muck, and I bet you it's a piece of that Kruger's left. Funny we don't come across some of his tools, though, or the hole where the powder went off."

"When we do that," observed Phil, "we'll be where we're going. Nothing to do then but lay off the men and wait till I get my papers. That's why I say, don't hurry so hard—we haven't got such a hustler and made their puny efforts seem so ineffectual by comparison, he managed in some mysterious way to gain the immediate approval of the Mexicans. Perhaps it was his all-pervasive good nature, or the respect inspired by his hardihood; perhaps the qualities of natural leadership which Bud made him a picked man among his brother Yaquis. But when, late in the afternoon, Bud came back from a trip to the tent he found Amigo in charge of the gang, heaving and struggling and making motions with his hand.

"Good enough!" he muttered, after watching him for a minute in silence, and leaving the new boss in command, he went back and started supper.

That was the beginning of a new day at the Eagle Tail, and when De Lancey came back from town—whether he went whenever he could conjure up an errand—he found that, for once, he had not been missed.

Bud was doing the blacksmithing. Amigo was directing the gang, and a fresh mess of beans was on the fire, the first hot food having gone to reinforce the Yaqui's backbones. But they were beans well spent, and Bud did not regret the raid on his grub-pile. If he could get half as much work for what he fed the Mexicans he could well rest content.

"But how did this Indian happen to find you?" demanded Phil, when his partner had explained his acquisition. "Say, he must have deserted from his company when they brought them back from Moctezuma!"

"More'n likely," assented Bud. "He ain't talking much, but I notice he keeps his eyes out—like a hawk—for a deserter if they could catch him. I'd hate to see him go that way."

"Well, if he's as good as this, let's take care of him!" cried Phil with enthusiasm. "I'll tell you, Bud, there's something big coming off pretty soon and I'd like to stay around town a little more if I could. I want to keep track of things."

"Er instance?" suggested Hooker dryly. It had struck him that Phil was spending a good deal of time in town already.

"Well, there's this revolution. Sure as shooting they're going to pull one soon. There's two thousand Mexican miners working at Fortuna, and they say every one of 'em has got a rifle buried. Now they're beginning to quit and drift out into the hills, and we're likely to hear from them any time."

"All the more reason for staying in camp, then," remarked Bud. "I'll tell you, Phil, I need you here. That's the way and I need you to say where to dig. We ain't doing much better than old Aragon did—just rooting around in that rock-pile—let's do a little timbering, and sink."
